

Our Vision ...

Create a community space inspired by the electrifying music and story of Jimi Hendrix.

To create a gathering place for individuals of diverse backgrounds and ages to celebrate cultural heritage, experience community pride, and enjoy innovative educational programming.

Our Mission ...

- Fundraise to support the development of Jimi Hendrix Park
- Coordinate the design process
- Organize innovative and inspiring programming
- Ensure community goals are met
- Support long-term maintenance of Jimi Hendrix Park

Our History ...

In 2006, the Seattle Parks and Recreation Department renamed the nearly 2.5-acre neighborhood park located in Seattle's Central District, Jimi Hendrix Park, with the goal of turning it into a community gathering space honoring this Seattle-born artist's extraordinary life and musical legacy. The Park lies adjacent to the old Colman School, which since 2008 has housed Seattle's Northwest African American Museum.

Now, a dedicated group of Seattle residents has come together to turn the dream of a park inspired by a "West Coast Seattle Boy" (the artist's own description) into reality. Named the Friends of Jimi Hendrix Park (FOJHP), the group has met for over a year, laying the groundwork for the development of a space that will draw visitors from across the globe. In keeping with the spirit of unity underlying the project as a whole, the Friends are committed to seeking community input into every aspect of the Park, from fundraising to design to programming. At the core of this project is the belief-embodied best by Jimi Hendrix himself-that with talent, determination and passion, anything is possible.

Our Funding Needs ...

Your generous donation can help shape the future of Jimi Hendrix Park. There will be a variety of ways that community members can donate to this special project, and it is our goal that every donor, regardless of the size of donation, will be acknowledged.

About Jimi Hendrix Park ...

Inspired by the music and legacy of Jimi Hendrix, the park, named in his honor, will beautify Seattle, motivate youth and others to achieve in music and art, and strengthen the cultural pulse of the Emerald City, Jimi Hendrix's hometown.

Jimi Hendrix Park is located in the heart of Seattle's vibrant Central District (2400 South Massachusetts Street), a thriving multi-cultural community rich in heritage. Nestled adjacent to the Northwest African American Museum and grounds of former Colman School, Jimi Hendrix Park will be a primary focal point for multi-cultural events, gatherings, and activities for the community.

At nearly 2.5 acres in size, Jimi Hendrix Park will be awash in vibrant colors of the Pacific Northwest and will include ample green space for everyone to enjoy. Featuring an array of new improvements that reflect themes found in his music, Jimi Hendrix Park may include lyrical stepping stones, rain drums, a sculpted butterfly garden and/or many other features. These artistic representations serve as a beacon to youth, summoning them to unlock their imagination and encourage them to pursue their dreams.

The park may also feature a performance space dedicated to showcasing the talents of local artists and musicians.
